Investment Objective

Albany Creek Investment Management team adopts an investment strategy structure consisting of three major elements and its unique data model to reduce volatility, fundamentally improve stability and build a portfolio with low downside risk.

Low-volatility fixed income hybrid strategy

Embodies Albany's philosophy, themes, and integrated investment process without the constraints of a benchmark or significant rating, sector/instrument limitation. The strategy is designed to offer the traditional benefits of a core bond approach – capital preservation and diversification – but with higher alpha potential and the opportunity to mitigate downside risk.

Cyclical Asset Allocation process (CAAP)

To tactical asset allocation involves monitoring the economic environment for patterns that have historically led to trends in stock market movements.

Barbell Approach

Is formed when a Trader invests in Long and Short duration bonds, as the short term maturities are rolled over they receive a higher interest rate, raising the value.

Risk Mitigation

This less restrictive approach allows additional flexibility to help minimize the potential for negative returns over periods of reasonable length by defensively positioning the portfolio.
